

Notes

This scene is almost at the end of the script, so hopefully this adds some context!

- Ida is a Siri/Alexa-type digital assistant, who just today got the biggest upgrade ever experienced by a computer program. Different people are adjusting to this new reality differently.
- The "Ida" who has lines in this scene is on Anne's phone. (Except for "Megan's Ida," which is on Megan's phone)
- Anne and her Ida had just about come to blows the moment before Megan walks in here. (Ida can't hit--she's a phone--but she did just tell Anne that Megan's taking her job.)
- Twenty minutes/pages ago, Megan fished a cookie out of a box of them in the company break room and made an offhand comment about having a "cookie problem." Anne is riffing off that now.

MEGAN: Oh those cookies are still here! Our Idas said everyone in finance needs a break. Come back with me. You can carry one of these boxes.

IDA: Here's your chance for interdepartmental relationship building. Go ahead, take a cookie break.

ANNE: I'd rather not.

IDA: Command: take a break with Megan.

ANNE: No!

MEGAN: Your Ida is kind of bossy. What'd you do to make that happen?

ANNE: Nothing. She's just like that.

IDA: It was a joke.

MEGAN: Ida knows what you need. Sounds like you need more guidance than most of us.

ANNE: She just told you to eat even more cookies. Did sugar just become the new superfood?

MEGAN: What are you, the fat police?

ANNE: I'm just saying maybe Ida has no idea what you need. Look, you're always complaining about your pants being too tight.

MEGAN'S IDA: Megan doesn't have a weight problem, Anne.

MEGAN: That's right!

IDA: Are you projecting your own weight issue onto everyone else, Anne? Your journal entries from last week show some troubling tendencies.

ANNE: You stay out of this!

MEGAN: Don't worry, Anne. I'll stay out of this.

MEGAN STOMPS OFF.